Coefficient of determination (R^2) of the model (in Spanish) !(409tbl3) We developed a model that predicts whether a supervisor will be satisfied or dissatisfied if a worker is allowed to interact with the supervisor, as shown in [Table 4{ref-type="table"}. We were able to build a model using a control variable that assesses the relationship between supervisor and worker. The R^2 of the model was 0.44, which represents a medium effect size ([@B22]). We built another model, which showed an R^2 of 0.58, a large effect size. In this model, we used the following predictors: daily interaction with the supervisor, communication with the supervisor (at least daily), relationship with the supervisor (best possible relationship), increase in performance level, less demotivating communication, no demotivating communication, and less critical communication (all at least once a week). Final predictive model (in Spanish) ![(409tbl4) Worker satisfaction and 82157476af
